rarely; that is, of such as sacrifice¹ themselves to death or danger for the good of their country; as was M. Regulus,² and the two Decii.³

LVI. OF JUDICATURE.⁴

JUDGES ought to remember that their office is jus dicere, and not jus dare; to interpret law, and not to make law, or give law. Else will it be like the authority claimed by the church of Rome, which under pretext of exposition of Scripture doth not stick⁵ to

¹ Sacrifice. To make an offering or sacrifice of one's self; to devote one's self as an expression of thanksgiving, reconciliation, consecration, or penitence.

² Marcus Atilius Regulus, a celebrated Roman general and consul, who died about 250 B.C. According to Roman tradition, Regulus in the first Punic War, after conquering and devastating the country of the Carthaginians up to the gates of Carthage, was finally defeated and taken prisoner. Some time afterwards, the Carthaginians sent Regulus to Rome to negotiate an exchange of prisoners, first exacting from him a promise, on oath, that, if he were unsuccessful, he would return to captivity. Regulus advised the Roman senate not to consent to the exchange, on the ground that it would be disadvantageous to Rome. Then, true to his oath, he returned to Carthage, where the enraged Carthaginians put him to death in the most barbarous manner.

³ The two Decii were father and son of the same name, Publius Decius Mus, of the plebeian gens of the Decii. The father was consul in 340 B.C. In the battle of Mt. Vesuvius in that year, Decius, repeating after the chief pontiff a solemn formula by which he devoted "the legions and auxiliaries of the enemy along with himself to the Dii Manes and the earth-goddess," then dashed into the ranks of the Latins, and met a death which was followed by a crushing defeat of the enemy. (Livy. VIII. 9.) The son, Publius Decius Mus, was consul for the fourth time in 295 B.C., and sacrificed himself after the manner of his father in the battle of Sentinum, when the left wing which he commanded was shaken by the Gauls. (Livy. X. 28.)

⁴ This essay contains the substance of Bacon's charge as Lord Chancellor to Sir Richard Hutton on being created puisne, or junior, judge of the common bench. The speech was delivered in the Court of Common Pleas, May 3, 1617. Sir Richard Hutton, 1561(?)–1639, was a fellow 'ancient' of Bacon's at Gray's Inn. Bacon on delivering him his patent complimented him on possessing the virtues of a judge.

⁵ Stick. To scruple; hesitate.

Of Studies – Francis Bacon

Assistant Professor of English

Studies, according to the English essayist Francis Bacon, enhance the knowledge of man. Man can sharpen his intellect and improve his skills by focusing on studies. A prudent person learns from books on different subjects. Studies mould the character of human beings. Education and experiences of life enable human intellect to attain perfection. Francis Bacon's essay 'Of Studies' is about the importance of reading/studies. Bacon discusses the purpose, method and benefits of reading in the essay. He believes that logic must safeguard and guide the methodical acquisition of knowledge. Reading, he opines, is essential to learning. Bacon contends that a study in diverse disciplines of knowledge not only equips a person for his professional life but also enables him to eliminate defects of the mind, like biases, prejudices, low analytical abilities, intellectual incompetence. He asserts that studies/reading empower a person and give him intellectual, moral and spiritual perfection. Bacon's essay removes wrong notions about reading and education prevalent in the Sixteenth century England. He believes that human beings do not just study for lucre/profit/profession but for development/evolution of mind.

Francis Bacon asserts that studies serve three purposes. Human beings derive pleasure from studies when they read in moments of leisure. Man also enjoys reading in loneliness as it gives him relaxation. Reading of different books enhances the communication skills of a person. It helps a person to learn nuances and correct usage of language that enable him converse properly and improve his speaking skills. Reading enables a man to embellish his style of speaking. Reading/studies provide prime assistance in earning livelihood. An educated man can apply the knowledge gained through studies in his profession. A sound knowledge of the subject, acquired over a period of time, makes him competent in professional life. Bacon discusses the role of age/maturity, experience and learning in making a person wise. Though age and maturity enable men to execute plans, learned men can guide and judge in a better manner. The subject/domain knowledge gives the learned men an upper hand to judge a situation or execute a plan.

Francis Bacon alludes to the flaws of using studies in an improper/inappropriate manner. He claims that spending a lot of time on reading reflects laziness (and inattentiveness). He believes that excessive use of bookish knowledge in speech is pretence. Anyone who uses
